Welcome to The Old Globe and this production of Guys and Dolls. Our goal is to serve all of San Diego and beyond through the art of theatre. Below are the mission and values that drive our work. We thank you for being a crucial part of what we do.

MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of The Old Globe is to preserve, strengthen, and advance American theatre by: creating theatrical experiences of the highest professional standards; producing and presenting works of exceptional merit, designed to reach current and future audiences; ensuring diversity and balance in programming; providing an environment for the growth and education of theatre professionals, audiences, and the community at large.

STATEMENT OF VALUES

The Old Globe believes that theatre matters. Our commitment is to make it matter to more people.

The values that shape this commitment are:

TRANSFORMATION

Theatre cultivates imagination and empathy, enriching our humanity and connecting us to each other by bringing us entertaining experiences, new ideas, and a wide range of stories told from many perspectives.

INCLUSION

The communities of San Diego, in their diversity and their commonality, are welcome and reflected at the Globe. Access for all to our stages and programs expands when we engage audiences in many ways and in many places.

EXCELLENCE

Our dedication to creating exceptional work demands a high standard of achievement in everything we do, on and off the stage.

STABILITY

Our priority every day is to steward a vital, nurturing, and financially secure institution that will thrive for generations.

IMPACT

Our prominence nationally and locally brings with it a responsibility to listen, collaborate, and act with integrity in order to serve.

PRODUCTION SPONSORS

MARY BETH ADDERLEY

Mary Beth Adderley is a native San Diegan who has been passionately involved with The Old Globe for many years and who currently serves on the Globe's Board of Directors. Mary Beth is deeply interested in the development of new musicals, and in 2014 she helped fund a workshop in New York that culminated in the public concert performances of Bright Star at Vassar College. She is also on the board of South Coast Repertory and is an emerita trustee of Vanderbilt University. Mary Beth has sponsored numerous Globe productions, including The American Plan, Richard O'Brien's The Rocky Horror Show, Allegiance, The Few, Bright Star, and Rain. She has also been a generous supporter of the Globe Gala for many years.

FLAINE AND DAVE DARWIN

Elaine and Dave Darwin, transplants from Palm Beach and Aspen, have enjoyed living in Rancho Santa Fe for 10 years, during which time they have immersed themselves in San Diego's cultural community. Dave has worked on the La Jolla Concours d'Elegance and joined the San Diego/Palm Springs chapter of the Classic Car Club of America. Elaine followed her interest in music and theatre by becoming a board member of La Jolla Music Society and The Old Globe. She has served the Globe in many capacities, most recently as Board Chair. Along the way, she chaired the Search Committee for a new artistic director and now chairs the Artistic Angels Committee. She thanks you, our audience, for your tremendous support of The Old Globe. The Darwins have sponsored Inherit the Wind, Be a Good Little Widow, the sensory-friendly performance of Dr. Seuss's How the Grinch Stole Christmas!, The Winter's Tale, Murder for Two, Camp David, and Globe for All. Elaine and Dave are pleased to invite you to enjoy tonight's performance of Guys and Dolls.

ANN DAVIES

Born and raised in England, Ann Davies moved to San Diego after living in Canada. She was married to the late John Davies, son of Lowell Davies, in whose honor the Festival Theatre is named. Following an elementary school teaching career, Ann now focuses much of her volunteer work on children's charities. She has been involved with Junior League, St. Germaine Auxiliary, and Voices for Children. She served on the board of the Child Abuse Prevention Foundation, and she is a former board president at San Diego Museum of Art. Currently, Ann delivers for Meals on Wheels and serves on the boards of The Old Globe and The Parker Foundation. She has enjoyed theatre at the Globe for many years and has sponsored Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Othello, Twelfth Night, and last year's Love's Labor's Lost.

PAULA AND BRIAN POWERS

Paula Powers joined the Globe's Board of Directors in 2011, and she currently serves on the Executive and Nominating Committees. She and Brian made Rancho Santa Fe their primary residence after living in New York, Hong Kong, Australia, and the Bay Area, where they still own a home. Paula earned her J.D. from the University of Michigan and specialized in trusts and estates, including work for private foundations and not-for-profits. Brian's J.D. comes from the University of Virginia, and he is currently Chairman Emeritus of Hellman & Friedman LLC, a private equity firm in San Francisco. Paula is also a member of the advisory board of ODC, a San Francisco-based modern dance company, and sits on the board of the Rancho Santa Fe Foundation. Together they have sponsored numerous productions at the Globe, including Nobody Loves You, Ken Ludwig's Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery, In Your Arms, a free student matinee of Dr. Seuss's How the Grinch Stole Christmas! for Title I schools, and last year's world premieres of both The Last Match and Rain. They have a strong commitment to new work, and the Powers New Voices Festival is named for them in honor of their significant Artistic Angels commitment to The Old Globe.

PRODUCTION SPONSORS

DARLENE MARCOS SHILEY

Darlene Marcos Shiley, along with her late husband Donald, has been a dedicated supporter of The Old Globe for more than three decades. Darlene's love of theatre and the arts stems from her early years acting in Northern California, where she met the love of her life, Donald P. Shiley. The Shileys' lead gift of $20 million to the Globe's Capital and Endowment Campaign marks the largest individual contribution in the Globe's history. The Shileys' generosity has helped fund many Globe projects, including the Shiley Artist-in-Residence program, the Shiley Terrace Apartments (which provide much-needed local housing for Globe artists), and an endowment that underwrites two full scholarships in The Old Globe and University of San Diego Shiley Graduate Theatre Program. Darlene continues to serve as one of the leading underwriters of the annual Globe Gala, and in honor of their enduring support, the stage of the Old Globe Theatre is named the Donald and Darlene Shiley Stage.

UNION BANK

Union Bank began supporting The Old Globe more than four decades ago and during that time has contributed more than $700,000 to the theatre's arts engagement and artistic programming, as well as providing bank employees to serve as volunteers in various capacities at the theatre. Union Bank is a champion of businesses and not-for-profits, helping to make San Diego a great community to live and work in. Over the years, Union Bank has sponsored many Globe productions, including The Comedy of Errors, The Glass Menagerie, Othello, As You Like It, Imaginary Friends, Allegiance, A Midsummer Night's Dream, and last year's tokyo fish story. In addition, many bank executives have served on the theatre's Board of Directors since the 1980s. The Old Globe applauds Union Bank for its longtime and generous support.

EXTRAORDINARY LEADERSHIP

Since the founding of The Old Globe in 1935, heroic leadership has made the theatre a cultural icon in San Diego and a leader in the American theatre. The following individuals and organizations, recognized for their tremendous cumulative giving, comprise a special group of friends who have played leading "behind-the-scenes" roles, helping to create productions on the three stages and programs in the community.

OUR THANKS

The vital support of the Globe's Artistic Angels and Benefactors sustains and expands the Globe's artistic excellence to help make theatre matter. In 1995, The Old Globe introduced its sponsorship program, and ever since, philanthropic-minded individuals and organizations have provided critical support to the theatre's annual fund while enjoying opportunities to interact with a production of their choice on an intimate level. The quality and artistry our audiences have come to expect are deeply impacted by these generous donors, whose commitment and vision are unmatched in San Diego.

UR THANKS

Welcome to The Old Globe!

A big American musical has become the Globe, and I can't wait to enjoy the spectacular revival of Guys and Dolls here at San Diego's premier arts organization.

Please join me in thanking the dedicated supporters of tonight's show. Production Sponsors Mary Beth Adderley, Elaine and Dave Darwin, Ann Davies, Paula and Brian Powers, and Darlene Marcos Shiley are all ardent supporters of the Globe—many of them are Board members—and their patronage of the arts in San Diego benefits us all. We also thank Union Bank, our Artist Sponsor for Terence Archie, who plays Sky Masterson.

The dedication of these philanthropists enables the Globe to achieve the highest levels of excellence not only here onstage, but also in the variety of arts engagement initiatives, workshops, and humanities programs surrounding the summer season. Our Arts Engagement department is how the Globe makes theatre matter beyond the stage, and we thank all of our donors for making these programs possible.

somewhat of a summer tradition at It is not only major gifts that sustain the Globe. We are so thankful to our large family of supporters—Friends of The Old Globe and Circle Patrons—and our loyal subscribers, who value the work we do. Many of you showed strong support earlier this summer when the arts community faced the possibility of deep budget cuts from the city. Thanks to your advocacy efforts, the original proposed 31 percent budget cut for the City of San Diego's Commission for Arts and Culture is being reduced to only 3.5 percent, which will help arts organizations across the county continue to deliver artwork and performances worthy of America's Finest City. Thank you for helping us make theatre matter.

> And now, on with the show! Great theatre requires great patrons, and we are so glad you are with us tonight.

THE PLAY

FROM BARRY

Classic plays—Shakespeare's plays—define the summer season at The Old Globe. But for the past few summers, we've responded to classical theatre outdoors by programming on our indoor proscenium stage the classics of another great theatrical form. Into the Woods, Kiss Me, Kate, and now Guys and Dolls: these are classics of the American musical theatre, and it brings the Globe real joy to give them pride of place in our season.

What makes Guys and Dolls a classic? Its magnificent Frank Loesser score, first off. From the title song to "Luck Be a Lady" to "I've Never Been in Love Before" to "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat," this musical is a compendium of Broadway standards. They range from romantic ballads to comic novelty songs to brassy blowouts to one of the showstoppingest "11 o'clock numbers" in musical theatre. The songs advance a story of a fantasy New York City peopled by tough-guys with hearts of gold. Brass-knucklers with magnificently evocative names like Brandy Bottle Bates and Angie the Ox may appear to be brutes, but inside they secretly pine for the peaceful suburban existence that their gangster exteriors belie. This contrast—tommy gun in the right hand, dishtowel in the left—is the stuff of comedy.

Damon Runyon, who invented this rogue's gallery and the Technicolor lingo they speak, reveled in the comic subtext of the criminal underworld as an ironic way to inoculate himself and his readers against the terrible gang violence roiling the streets of his beloved New York, a strategy David Chase emulated when he humanized vicious Mafia don Tony Soprano by dropping him on a therapist's couch in New Jersey. In Guys and Dolls's brilliant book by librettists Jo Swerling and Abe Burrows, this strategy—call it the Happy Hit Man—achieves a surprising buoyancy. The guns in this show couldn't hurt a fly. The debate between the goodness of the Salvation Army and the rough-and-tumble of the Palooka is over before it even begins: after all, in a musical, when the going gets tough, the tough get dancing.

A succesful revival of a stage classic in any form is all about the caliber of the director tasked with the job. The Globe is very fortunate to have one of the great ones at the helm of Guys and Dolls. Josh Rhodes is becoming a regular here, thank goodness. His rollicking production of Baskerville was one of the smash hits in the history of the Shervl and Harvey White Theatre, and his choreography of Bright Star gave that wonderful production its effervescent physical lilt. Josh is a choreographer of considerable wit and imagination, and a director whose theatrical toolbox is rich with craft and interpretive rigor. He has injected a freshness and vitality into this enduring musical. The Guys and Dolls that he and his ace design team and thrilling company of actor/dancer/singers have fashioned here is a major achievement. (Okay, it may not be quite at the level of the exceedingly memorable 1981 Fair Lawn High School production in which I starred at age 18, but hey, that one was like lightning in a bottle.)

A great American musical comedy, lovingly revived by experts, and produced at the impeccable standard of excellence for which The Old Globe is renowned. That's a recipe for a fun evening in the theatre, and I'm glad to serve it up.

Thanks for coming. Enjoy the show.

THE PLAY

Director/choreographer Josh Rhodes talks about bringing one of the most iconic American musicals to new and vibrant life.

Interview by Danielle Mages Amato

What drew you to this piece as a director and made you want to work on it?

It's one of the greatest musicals ever written. The music is so solid, the ideas are so rich, the characters are so vibrant, and the writing is so strong. It's just a perfect gem of a show. So if somebody asks you to do it, you say, "Great! That's fantastic!"

But what really hooked me into the material was going back and reading Damon Runyon's short stories. So many of us have seen Guys and Dolls; I myself thought I knew the show really well. But if you go back and read the short stories, you realize that the inspiration for the musical was one of our great American comic writers. He wasn't known for his narratives, but for his style. It's the turn of phrase, the eccentric style of the words he chooses for his delicious characters that just makes you laugh. When I read his work, I was really inspired, and I thought: okay, this is my take for this production. I want to bring Damon Runyon to the stage. I want the cast to really embrace the language, to understand where the show came from, and to bring that forward for the audience.

What does that mean in the rehearsal room? How do you encourage the actors to embrace the language?

We do exercises, especially to bring out Runyon's blend of high and low language. He writes gangsters with a heart of gold, characters who are very low-class but trying to act high-class. Often, in an attempt to stay alive, they have to speak and phrase things with great courtesy, so as not to offend someone or get killed. So there's this fascinating mixture in the way they speak.

One of the exercises we do is to work with Shakespeare. Everyone runs to the center of the room and says a line of Shakespeare as if they're living on Broadway in 1953 in a Damon Runyon musical. It's really amazing how well it works, how it captures that idea of a low-class gangster trying to create high art with his voice. We've also gone back and read old Abe Burrows radio plays. Burrows wrote the book for the musical, and a lot of it is based on old-fashioned Jewish humor—that's really the style they're riffing on. So we watched a lot of sketch comedies from the '40s and '50s with Sid Caesar, Milton Berle, and Imogene Coca. Those have been a great way to embrace the language and the rhythm of the script.

What were some of the challenges for your design team?

When it was originally produced, Guys and Dolls had a lot of old-fashioned painted drops that would come in, and the actors would do a scene downstage while the crew changed the set behind the drop. That's the way shows were written at the time. But our great scenic designer, Lee Savage, didn't want to do that version of Guys and Dolls. We wanted to come up with a way to make it visually a little more modern, so that the set poetically evokes New York, rather than literally giving us drops with New York painted on them. Lee's design asks for seemless and cinematic transitions, more of what you expect when you see a contemporary musical. You don't want people to feel like they're watching a show that's an exact replica of something they saw in the '50s or '60s. You want it to surprise and yet remain a vibrant valentine to New York City.

How would you describe the choreography you've developed for the show? How is it unique to you as a choreographer?

This show is a dream for a choreographer. The choreography is highly athletic, sharp, sexy, and full of story. When creating the movement, the most important element was matching the wit and energy of the story.

One of the things I've done to accomplish this is to take Adelaide's Hot Box numbers—which are sometimes choreographed as huge floor shows—and push them toward something you would find in a small burlesque club in Hell's Kitchen. Lee Savage found research images of a small, elevated stage in the '50s, and I immediately went with that. I loved the idea of the women stripping high above like goddesses while the men hung on the sides. It allowed me to find humor and charm in her production numbers.

What were some of the most fun scenes or numbers to work on?

I'm definitely very proud of "Runyonland," the opening number. Our music director Sinai Tabak helped me create a danced overture, set to all the melodies that you're going to hear in the course of the show. It's this giant dance story, just a great way to meet all these eclectic Damon Runyon characters. Some of them are characters I took right out of Runyon's other short stories—like Apple Annie from the story "Madame La Gimp"—fun characters that aren't even in Guys and Dolls. It's a new take on "Runyonland," and I'm really happy with it.

It's a very diverse cast—was that something you set out to do when you first started working on the show?

Not really—the casting came first, and my thinking about what it meant came later. When you're auditioning for a show like this, it's just terribly obvious when the right person walks in the room. They're people who understand the music of the language and have the perfect qualities for the character. Nathan Detroit has to be in a state of comedic peril the whole show, and J. Bernard Calloway can totally pull that off. You have to watch him yell and scream and kick and shout, and still be able to laugh at him and love him. That's a really particular quality that's hard to find. And I've always been a fan of Terence Archie's. First of all, he's not hard to look at. He's also got this dynamic charisma—there's a princely air to him that's a great fit for Sky Masterson, who plays his cards so close to the chest. He's got to live on charisma until he falls in love with Sarah and lets us see another side of him.

But the more I thought about the casting, the more I thought about the subtitle of the piece: "A Musical Fable of Broadway." Guys and Dolls is one of the great American fables, and I believe everybody deserves the right to tell this story. I couldn't be more thrilled to have these actors and this cast

When you direct a classic musical like this, do you think about making it relevant to a modern audience?

No, I really just try to bring it to life as fully as possible. I do consider the lens of the audience, and the theatre styles they're used to. And I don't want to direct a museum piece. But the most important thing is the spirit of what makes the show great. That's what I have to pull out, and that is timeless.

THE POET OF PROHIBITION-ERA NFW YORK

The work and times of Damon Runyon.

By Danielle Mages Amato

One evening along about seven o'clock I am sitting in Mindy's restaurant putting on the gefilte fish, which is a dish I am very fond of, when in come three parties from Brooklyn wearing caps as follows: Harry the Horse, Little Isadore, and Spanish John. Now these parties are not such parties as I will care to have much truck with, because I often hear rumors about them that are very discreditable, even if the rumors are not true. In fact, I hear that many citizens of Brooklyn will be very glad indeed to see Harry the Horse, Little Isadore, and Spanish John move away from there, as they are always doing something that is considered a knock to the community, such as robbing people, or maybe shooting or stabbing them, and throwing pineapples, and carrying on generally.

—"Butch Minds the Baby," Damon Runyon

"By all accounts," writes fellow New York journalist Pete Guys, Dolls, and Curveballs, a collection edited by sportswriter/ Hamill, Damon Runyon "was a small, quiet man, given to expensive clothes and good food, with a fine eye for detail and an ear for the nuances of human speech." One of the great American prose stylists of the 20th century, Runyon is best known today as the writer whose work inspired the musical Guys and Dolls. But in the 1930s and '40s, he was the popular poet of Prohibition- and Depression-era New York, a prolific short-story writer who published more than 80 tales chronicling the colorful underworld of midtown Manhattan.

The Manhattan of Damon Runyon's stories is a thousand miles—both literally and metaphorically—from the Manhattan of his birthplace: Manhattan, Kansas. The son of a second-generation newspaperman, Runyon followed in his father's footsteps, writing for several Colorado newspapers before moving to the East Coast in 1910 to take a job for William Randolph Hearst's New York American. He quickly rose to prominence as a sports journalist and feature writer, often uncovering stories that were unusual, surprising, and undeniably eccentric. (His baseball writings are compiled in historian Jim Reisler.)

Runyon married fellow reporter Ellen Egan, with whom he had two children, but the marriage was short-lived. Runyon's true passions were his work, his gambling (of which he did much), and his solitude, particularly his habit of sitting in allnight delis—like Lindy's on Broadway and 52nd Street—and watching New York stroll by. "I am the sedentary champion of the city," he wrote. "In order to learn anything of importance, I must remain seated. Why I am the best is that I can last an entire day without causing a chair to squeak."

The gamblers and gangsters of Runyon's stories were fictional, stylized creatures of his own imagination, but they had their genesis in people he knew well. One of Runyon's close friends was Arnold Rothstein, a notorious mob kingpin whom many believe conspired to fix the 1919 World Series. Runyon modeled several characters on this man known as "The Brain," including, supposedly, Nathan Detroit. Runyon also based characters on mobster accountant Otto Berman, a friend who became, in Runyon's fiction, a gambler named "Regret." While Runyon's writings are by and large comic stories, they possess an undercurrent of violence that reflects the reality of 1930s and '40s New York. Indeed, the real-life Rothstein and Berman were both murdered in mob hits. New Yorker journalist Adam Gopnik, who has written compellingly about Runyon, suggests that Runyon discovered "he could dramatize his accumulated experience of violence on Broadway if he made it funny. ... Fiction was a way of putting funny hats on hit men."

However, the true genius and lasting impact of Runyon's stories come not only from the unique window he offers into the history of New York, but above all from his language, the matchless rhythm and music of his prose. Runyon was a wordsmith in the truest sense, creating an idiosyncratic slang for his characters, a blend of real words and invented jargon that can be understood only through context. His characters often twist ordinary language into elaborate spirals, blending street language with high-toned sentence structure in a pattern so distinctive it has come to be called "Runyonesque." And no character in Runyon's stories—not even his understated, observant, and ubiquitous narratorever uses the past tense, or for that matter, contractions. So in his story "The Idyll of Miss Sarah Brown," one of the bases for the musical Guys and Dolls, when Sarah tells Sky she knows a thing or two about gambling, she says, "I ought to. It ruins my poor papa and my brother Joe. If you wish to gamble for souls, Mister Sky, gamble for your own soul. ... This two dollars against your soul, Mister Sky. It is all I have, but it is more than your soul is worth."

Runyon's stories proved incredibly popular in their time. "I took one little section of New York," he said, "and made a half a million dollars writing about it." The stories inspired at least 16 films, and Runyon himself relocated to Hollywood in the early 1940s to try his hand at producing. But by 1946 he had returned to his true home of New York, where he died of throat cancer at 66. His friend, media commentator Walter Winchell, founded the Damon Runyon Cancer Research Foundation in his honor that same year. Runyon did not live to see the 1950 Broadway opening of Guys and Dolls, the musical that would give his stories their most lasting public fame.

"Today not many remember Runyon himself," writes Runyon's chronicler Pete Hamill, "or the era in which he lived with so much verve and melancholy," but the stories endure. "They forever remain part of the long tale of New York." ■

The only time The Sky ever thinks of money as money is when he is broke, and the only way he can tell he is broke is when he reaches into his pocket and finds nothing there but his fingers. Then it is necessary for The Sky to go out and dig up some fresh scratch somewhere, and when it comes to digging up scratch, The Sky is practically supernatural. He can get more potatoes on the strength of a telegram to some place or other than John D. Rockefeller can get on collateral.

-"The Idyll of Miss Sarah Brown," Damon Runyon

There are some very tough guys around the table, too, including guys who will shoot you in the head, or maybe the stomach, and think nothing whatever about the matter. In fact, when I see such guys as Harry the Horse, from Brooklyn, and Sleepout Sam Levinsky, and Lone Louie, from Harlem, I know this is a very bad place for my blood pressure, for these are very tough guys indeed.

DAMON RUNYON

(Story and Characters), born in New York City in 1880, was an American short-story writer, journalist, and humorist. He was the archetype of the tough, hardnosed street reporter who fraternized socially with gangsters and hoodlums. He began in the newspaper business as a child and went on to cover news, sports, politics, and crime during his time in the business. He also published verses and short stories in national publications such as Harper's Weekly and McClure's. He wrote his first book in 1911, a collection of poems entitled The Tents, and began covering World War I soon thereafter. By the 1920s, Mr. Runyon had developed his own distinct style as a prolific author, and in the late 1930s, he began writing and producing movies in Hollywood. Mr. Runyon's works served as the basis for 29 feature films, including Lady for a Day directed by Frank Capra (1933), Little Miss Marker starring Shirley Temple (1934), The Lemon Drop Kid starring Bob Hope (1951), and Pocket Full of Miracles with Bette Davis (1961). In all, Mr. Runyon's literary legacy includes over 700 stories, novellas, plays, articles, essays, and poems. Among his best-known works is Guys and Dolls, which was adapted for the stage in 1950 as a musical on Broadway, where it ran 1,200 performances. It was then brought to film in 1955 starring Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Vivian Blaine, and Jean Simmons. The musical has been staged in over 25 countries and is performed over 3,000 times annually in high schools, universities, and community and regional theatres, making it one of the most produced musicals of all time.

FRANK LOESSER

(Music and Lyrics), one of America's great composer/lyricists, began his songwriting career during the Great Depression as a lyricist, contributing songs to Broadway revues and nightclub acts. His work with composer Irving Actman in the 1936 revue The Illustrator's Show led to a songwriting contract in Hollywood, where he spent the next 11 years working with such composers as Burton Lane, Jule Styne, Arthur Schwartz, and Hoagy Carmichael. Some of his film songs from that period include "Two Sleepy People," "Jingle Jangle Jingle," and "I Don't Want to Walk Without You." The first song for which Mr. Loesser wrote both words and music was "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," written during his World War II service. His Hollywood work after the war included the hit songs "Spring Will Be a Little Late This Year," "A Slow Boat to China," and the 1949 Oscar-winning song "Baby, It's Cold Outside." In 1948 Mr. Loesser was approached by fledgling Broadway producers Cy Feuer and Ernest Martin to write music and lyrics to George Abbott's libretto for an adaptation of the classic Brandon Thomas play Charley's Aunt. The new musical, which starred Ray Bolger, was called Where's Charley? and was a hit. This led to Mr. Loesser's next show, the hugely influential and successful Guys and Dolls in 1950, also produced by Mr. Feuer and Mr. Martin, with a script by Abe Burrows and Jo Swerling. In 1956 Mr. Loesser wrote the libretto, music, and lyrics for his next show, The Most Happy Fella, adapted from Sidney Howard's play They Knew What They Wanted. This impressive score contains over 30 musical numbers and makes extensive use of operatic techniques and forms, including recitative, arias, duets, trios, and choral numbers. In 1960 Mr. Loesser provided the score and was co-librettist for Greenwillow. The next year he wrote the score for the Pulitzer Prize-winning How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying. His last show, Pleasures and Palaces, closed in 1965 during out-of-town tryouts. frankloesser.com.

JO SWERLING

(Book), born in Russia in 1897, was a playwright, screenwriter, and vaudeville sketch writer. Mr. Swerling's long career began as a reporter and feature writer in New York and Chicago.

ABE BURROWS

(Book) studied to be a doctor and an accountant and had a career in sales before becoming a successful radio scriptwriter and writer/performer of musical parody numbers. His first Broadway libretto was Guys and Dolls, co-written with Jo Swerling, with a score by Frank Loesser. Among the musicals for which Mr. Burrows provided librettos are Make a Wish; Can-Can and Silk Stockings, both with scores by Cole Porter; Say, Darling; and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, which he also directed, with a score by Frank Loesser. Mr. Burrows's non-musical plays include Cactus Flower, which he wrote and directed; and Forty Carats, which he directed.

JOSH RHODES

(Director and Choreographer) most recently directed the Globe production of Ken Ludwig's Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery, following his work as choreographer on the highly acclaimed Bright Star (also Broadway, 2016 Astaire and Outer Critics Circle Award

BARRY EDELSTEIN

(Erna Finci Viterbi Artistic Director) is a stage director, producer, author, and educator. Recognized as one of the leading American authorities on the works of Shakespeare, he has directed nearly half of the Bard's plays. His Globe directing credits include The Winter's Tale, Othello, The Twenty-seventh Man, the world premiere of Rain, Picasso at the Lapin Agile, and the upcoming Hamlet. He also directed All's Well That Ends Well as the inaugural production of the Globe for All community tour. As Director of the Shakespeare Initiative at The Public Theater (2008–2012), Mr. Edelstein oversaw all of the company's Shakespearean productions as well as its educational, community outreach, and artist-training programs. At The Public, he staged the world premiere of The Twenty-seventh Man, Julius Caesar, The Merchant of Venice, Timon of Athens, and Steve Martin's WASP and Other Plays. He was also Associate Producer of The Public's Broadway production of The Merchant of Venice starring Al Pacino. From 1998 to 2003 he was Artistic Director of Classic Stage Company. Mr. Edelstein's other Shakespearean directorial credits include The Winter's Tale at Classic Stage Company; As You Like It starring Gwyneth Paltrow; and Richard III starring John Turturro. His additional credits include the Lucille Lortel Award-winning revival of Arthur Miller's All My Sons; the world premiere of Steve Martin's The Underpants, which he commissioned; and Molière's The Misanthrope starring Uma Thurman in her stage debut. Mr. Edelstein has taught Shakespearean acting at The Juilliard School, New York University's Graduate Acting Program, and the University of Southern California. His book Thinking Shakespeare is the standard text on American Shakespearean acting. He is also the author of Bardisms: Shakespeare for All Occasions. He is a graduate of Tufts University and the University of Oxford, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar.

JACK O'BRIEN

(Artistic Director Emeritus) served as Artistic Director of The Old Globe from 1981 through 2007. Jack Be Nimble: The Accidental Education of an Unintentional Director, his memoir about the early years of his career, was released in 2013 by Farrar, Straus and Giroux.

CRAIG NOEL

(Founding Director) was born on August 25, 1915, and in 2015 The Old Globe celebrated the 100th birthday of this theatre legend who was instrumental in cultivating the San Diego arts community. Mr. Noel was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late '40s, the expansion to two theatres in the '50s, Globe Educational Tours in the '70s, and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego Graduate Theatre Program in the '80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the éminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego's "Living Treasures." He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include the San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city's history; the Governor's Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association's Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University's Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego; Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University; and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts—the nation's highest honor for artistic excellence—in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

ARTS ENGAGEMENT

A REASON TO WAKE UP

By Freedome Bradley-Ballentine and Mike Hausberg

In many ways, Jorge Rivas is a typical 22-year-old San Diegan. He goes to school, he has a part-time job, he hangs out with friends. But there is something that sets him apart: he believes that theatre matters and has seen firsthand the impact it can have on young people's lives.

A child of Mexican immigrants, Rivas grew up in the workingclass neighborhood of San Ysidro. "My parents weren't exactly artsy people," he says. "Growing up, going to theatre wasn't something Latinos typically did."

His first experience with professional theatre came through The Old Globe's free student matinee program. He saw a production of the 2012 musical Allegiance and was forever changed. "That's the show that made me love theatre. The story, the performance, the sets, the costumes, everything! I was just blown away by what you could do onstage."

Inspired by what he saw, Rivas participated in the Globe's summer Shakespeare intensive for teens and got more involved with his high school drama program. "In the beginning we started out small. Not many people would come to our performances. But we worked hard, and now we routinely sell out. Some of that has to do with what I've learned at the Globe."

Now a full-time student at Southwestern College, where he majors in theatre, Rivas returned again to the Globe last year as an intern in the Arts Engagement department. He found similarities between the programming at the Globe and the art he was creating in his own community, and that symmetry bolstered his work in both locations. When his internship ended earlier this year, he readily accepted a part-time position as a programs assistant.

"It's been a weird but great transition going from student matinee viewer and summer program participant to intern and employee at the Globe. I've gone from watching shows to now helping make them happen. I'm in a place now where I can create a future for myself for years to come."

These experiences have given Rivas the drive to make an even bigger difference for young people in his neighborhood. At a recent city council meeting he got his chance, speaking passionately about the necessity of arts not only to create a vibrant, world-class city, but also to change people's lives. "I wouldn't be here right now if it weren't for the arts and the funding provided by the city. And a lot of students have come to me saying that they were lost, they were seriously contemplating suicide, but the arts gave them a reason to wake up in the morning."

As his love of theatre and his connection to his community have deepened, Rivas continues to be thankful for the opportunities the Globe has given him. He has even seen his parents coming around. "They're slowly starting to see that this is not just a hobby, it's a profession, which is a big deal. They're still learning. So am I."
